DETAILS OF THE SENATE CAUCUS.

Special to the Star.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The full Democratic Senate nominations are as follows: John C. Burck, of Tennessee, was nominated for Secretary; Richard J. Bright, of Indiana, for Secretary-at-Arms; Francis E. Shober, of North Carolina, for Chief Clerk; E. B. Bailey Peyton, of Virginia, for Executive Clerk, and Rev. James J. Bullock, of Virginia, for Chaplain.

SELECTION OF A SECRETARY.

The Secretary was chosen in the morning. Mr. Burck's principal competitors were the Hon. Harvey M. Watterson; Ex-Congressman Stenger, of Pennsylvania; Waddell, of North Carolina, and Franklin, of Missouri. Mr. Watterson, at the outset, had more strength than any of the candidates, and on the first ballot received a greater number of votes than any of his competitors.

A majority of the Senators believed that the office of Secretary should be filled by a younger and more active man than Mr. Watterson, and, as Mr. Burck apparently filled the bill, he was nominated. The gentlemen selected to succeed Gorham are about forty-five years of age, a graduate of Yale College, editor and proprietor of the Nashville Union and American, Secretary of the Democratic State Committee of Tennessee, and an active, enthusiastic Democrat. Mr. Burck was a Confederate during the war, and was attached to the staff of General (now Senator) Harris, of Tennessee.

THE OTHER SENATE OFFICERS.

In the afternoon the caucus reassembled, and the candidates for other offices were selected. On the first ballot of Secretary-at-Arms, L. Q. C. Washington, of Virginia, received sixteen votes, and Richard D. Bright, of Indiana, ten votes. Other candidates were complemented by small votes. Mr. Washington would probably have been elected, had not the Secretary been chosen from the section which Mr. Watterson represents. The Senators were agreed that inasmuch as a Southern man had been nominated for the office of Secretary, the candidate for the office of Secretary-at-Arms should be a Northern man. Senator McPherson made a short speech demanding that one of the elective offices at least should be given to the East. He plainly stated that the people of the North and East, regardless of party, looked with apprehension upon the continued absorption of the patronage of the Government by the South. No arguments in reply were made, and Bright was elected on the third ballot.

Francis E. Shober, of North Carolina, was nominated for Chief Clerk of the Senate on the first ballot. Neil S. Brown, the Reading Clerk of the House, wanted the place, but the fact that the Secretary had been nominated from Tennessee militated against his canvass. Shober is a newspaper man, but little is known of him in Washington.

For the Executive Clerkship there were E. B. Bailey Peyton, of Virginia; A. O. Bull, of Missouri, one of the editors of Donnell's Capital; W. O. Brown, of the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator, and Major Farr, of the District of Columbia. Peyton received the nomination on the third ballot. He is a Virginian, and fought during the war on General Lee's staff.

Bullock, who will be elected Chaplain, is an Alexandria clergyman.

An important meeting of the French Chamber of Commerce was held to-day, at which resolutions were adopted protesting against the Protectionist policy.

SIMPLE SIMON'S SUIT.

Mr. Oliver Relates the History of His Widow.

National Associated Press to the Star.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The limited dimensions of the Circuit Court were sorely taxed this morning by the immense number of persons assembled to listen to the resumption of the proceedings in the case of Oliver vs. Cameron.

The argument, which was begun yesterday afternoon by General Butler on the admission of two letters offered by plaintiff's counsel, was continued at the opening of Court by Mr. Peter, of counsel for the plaintiff.

In the argument of General Butler he claimed that the letters not having been proved to have been written by Senator Cameron, were clearly inadmissible, and added that the defense would prove to the entire satisfaction of the Court that the letters were forgeries.

Judge Carter decided that as Mrs. Oliver had testified that the letters were in the handwriting of Senator Cameron, they were admissible.

General Butler made some remarks tending to impugn the veracity of Mr. Peter, plaintiff's counsel.

Mr. Peter, in strong terms, denounced the manner of the doughty warrior of Fort Fisher and repelled the attack in a spirited manner.

Judge Carter said there was no necessity of such a display of feeling, and in fact there should be no feeling in the case, except indignation, contempt and regret.

A letter purporting to have been written by the Senator to Mrs. Oliver, dated Harrisburg, telling her to find a better home than in Washington, and hoping that she would soon be his wife, were read by Mr. Peter, and he announced that the testimony of the plaintiff was concluded.

Thomas M. Oliver, the reputed husband of the plaintiff, testified that he, in the spring of 1850, visited New York to buy goods. He first saw plaintiff at Osborne's store, where Masonic regalia was sold. She was working there. Went to New York again in the fall and inquired for plaintiff, but she was absent.

In 1851 again visited New York and went in company with others to an assignment house, and there met plaintiff. Plaintiff then told witness that she came to America in 1848 with her father, while in New York she had been seduced by a man named Platt under promise of marriage, and that she had a child by Platt.

She told witness that her name was Mary Ann McArthur, but did not mention the name of the "Duke of Ormond." Witness took plaintiff to North Carolina. Afterwards boarded at same house with her in Louisville and sent her to school at his expense. Plaintiff told witness that she had been baptized and named a Catholic.

He first sent her to a Catholic school, but she became dissatisfied, and he then sent her to a Methodist school at Bloomfield. Witness tried to reform plaintiff and during her stay in Louisville as far as witness was concerned, plaintiff was perfectly pure. Pending the examination of Mr. Oliver, court took recess.

The Baldwin Mystery

Arrests, Clues, Theories and Probabilities.

More Important Arrests Looked For To-day.

The murder of Harry Baldwin on last Saturday night is still enveloped in mystery. All the efforts of the Chief of Police and his detective force have failed to throw any definite light upon the subject. The general impression is, however, that Baldwin met his fate in the house of Kitty Bennett, No. 297 Elm street, although evidence sufficiently strong enough to warrant the fixing of the crime to that place has not yet been developed.

In our late edition last evening we mentioned that the Chief of Police had been called upon by a gentleman, who stated that Baldwin had been shot in Kitty Bennett's place by one of the girls, and had been carried out by a prominent citizen whose name is withheld.

Kitty Bennett Arrested.

Upon this statement, Chief of Police Wappenstein late last evening sent Sergeant Devine and Officers Conroy and Pettit to Kitty Bennett's, to make whatever arrests were necessary. They returned a short time afterwards with the following persons, who were thus registered on the slate, after which they were locked up: Kate Bennett, age thirty-one, residence 237 Elm street; Blanche Rowley, hairdresser, age twenty-seven, residence 237 Elm street; Georgia Sheppard, colored domestic, 237 Elm street; Hattie Jones, servant; Martha Buckner, cook, on the carpet.

Sergeant Devine, previous to the arrest, made a thorough examination of the house. In the middle room of the third story steps to the number of about fifty were discovered on the Axminster carpet, near the bureau and in the vicinity of the window overlooking the alley.

The spots, none of which exceeded in size a silver dime, were all clustered within a radius of four feet. In color they were dark, and from all appearances no attempt had been made to clean them up. They were, by permission of Kitty Bennett, cut out the piece of carpet containing the spots, and it was given to Professor Wayne for analysis. Kitty says that the stains are nothing but glycerine which had been spilled. On the inside of a small drawer in the room were found two large red stains, which had been partly rubbed or washed off.

OTHER ARRESTS.

After the Bennett raid the Chief ordered the arrest of Mrs. Dalton and her two daughters, Mary and Birdie, who live at No. 235 Elm street. The girls maintain their mother by their life of shame, and a report coming to the Chief that Baldwin had been intimate with one of them, he caused the arrest of the entire family. They deny knowing anything about the mysterious affair whatever.

Anderson Mason No. 89 East Seventh street, Elizabeth Pfeister No. 235 Elm street, and John H. Dalton, No. 235 Elm street, the Ninth-street Station-house on suspicion.

BEFORE THE CORONER.

Jacob Burnet, Jr., testified that he resided at No. 162 West Eighth street; that last Saturday night he heard a pistol fired about 12 o'clock; that his house is about 60 feet east of the alley in which the value and pistol were found; that the shot sounded as if it was farther away than that alley.

Wm. Dagner testified that he was in Brown's saloon on Elm street last Saturday night; about half-past 12 o'clock he heard a pistol shot which sounded as though it came from the direction of Italian Joe's saloon; he looked out and saw a party standing in front of the drug store, corner of Ninth and Elm streets; he went over and asked what was the matter; he was told that the party was celebrating the birthday of one of the men in the assembly; he then returned to the saloon; did not see anyone on the east side of Elm street.

Adella Willey testified—I was sitting in my saloon at room 1 of Brown's saloon, between 12 and 1 o'clock I heard a pistol fired; I looked out and saw a crowd at Ninth and Elm streets; I saw Mrs. Dalton looking out of her window, next door to Brown's saloon. She asked me what was the matter, and I told her that a party was celebrating the birthday of one of the men in the assembly; I saw no person at all on the east side of Elm street.

Ann Searing testified to having found the value. She did not look around in the alley, and did not see any dark spots that she had seen on Saturday night.

W. J. Hill, a salesman at Shillito's, testified to having made the acquaintance of Baldwin at Connersville, Indiana. Saw him several times during the day; he was in the fall of a young man, dressed in dark clothes with him several times during the afternoon. We left Connersville on the train together. When we reached the depot in this city, I saw him getting ready to leave the car, and waved his hand to me. I then took a Sixth-street car, and did not see him again.

W. F. Powell, a gun dealer, testified that the ball taken from the brain of deceased was a 22-caliber cartridge. The pistol shown him (the one found in the alley) he stated was a 25-caliber, but a 22-caliber cartridge could be shot from a 25-caliber pistol, but he doubted whether the ball would enter the skull at a point where it is as thick as the physicians described, unless fired at a very short distance, say two or three feet.

YAGNER RUMORS.

Rumors and statements of all descriptions are heard upon the streets. One was that a boy named Henderson had made the statement that he had frequently carried notes from Baldwin to one of Kitty Bennett's girls, and "Tillie." The boy was taken before Colonel Wappenstein, where he stated that there was no truth in what he had said, but that he had merely made the remark for fun.

Mr. Richard Strobert, living at No. 283 Race street, stated that he was standing in front of Mr. Wiswell's house on last Sunday conversing about the tragedy, when a man of short stature came up and made the following statement: "I saw Mr. Baldwin last night. I was a saloon car with him. There was a colored man alongside of him, and I heard Baldwin say 'go away from me, I don't want anything more to do with you.' They afterward got off, and a little later I heard a shot fired." Mr. Strobert says he did not know the man.

Another man made a statement that Baldwin had got on a Sixth street car at the depot last Saturday night, but the conductor of the car which passes the depot was a colored man, and he did not see Baldwin say 'go away from me, I don't want anything more to do with you.' They afterward got off, and a little later I heard a shot fired." Mr. Strobert says he did not know the man.

THE INQUEST TEMPORARILY POSTPONED.

Coroner Carrick last evening postponed the inquest to an indefinite time, owing to the fact that he has no witnesses to examine who could give any information that might aid in solving the mystery connected with Harry Baldwin's death. He is waiting to hear what the Chief of Police and his men can get out of Kitty Bennett and her girls. As soon as something is learned from them, or if any outside parties testify ing him that they have anything to offer in the case, the inquest will be resumed.

Mr. A. C. Kraemer, the attorney for Mr. Wm. Schaller, stated to-day that he had found nothing new as to the affair, although he was working hard to obtain the facts as to who did the shooting.

THE CARPET.

The Coroner, about 10 o'clock this morning, drove down to the Bennett mansion and secured the piece of carpet, which is said to be stained with blood. The piece was shortly before noon taken to Prof. Wayne's laboratory, on Broadway, near Eighth street, where it will undergo a chemical analysis of the substance that produced the stains.

A TALK WITH THE DALTONS.

A Star reporter had a talk with the Dalton family this morning. They deny all knowledge of the affair whatever. They say they do not know Baldwin, and never knew anything about him. The girls state that they have a sister named Emma, who has not been near their house for eleven months.

The officers having heard that this sister Emma had been intimate with Baldwin, and thinking that the Dalton people could throw some light on the whereabouts of Emma on the fatal night, therefore caused the arrest of these parties. They say they do not know where Emma keeps herself at all, although she is in the city.

OFFICER WATTS'S THEORY.

Detective Jim White still hangs on to the theory that Baldwin had gone into the alley next to O'Hara's marble-yard, and that while there was shot by parties with the intention of robbery.

He says that the statement of the woman Minna, that she saw Baldwin pass her house, confirms his theory that the ill-fated man, after lying in the alley some time, came to his senses and wandered out through the alley onto Elm street, where he was shot.

The city continues to be filled with the wildest rumors, but after tracing them out nine out of ten prove to be totally without foundation.

Officers and detectives are hard at work, and it is believed other important arrests will be made within the next few hours.

WHAT THE WOMEN SAY.

The women, whose names were under arrest, are very indignant that they should be mixed up in the affair at all. They claim to know nothing of the matter whatever, and think it a great injustice that they are compelled to be placed under lock and key merely on the rumors noised about the streets that Baldwin came to his death in the Bennett house.

Minna Wappenstein this morning stated that she intended to make a charge against the women, by which he can hold them, and that he will detain all of them until further developments.

ANOTHER GIRL MENTIONED.

A party told the Chief this morning that a girl named "Hattie," whom this party stated was intimate with Kitty Bennett's house, had sent a colored girl down to the depot to meet Baldwin, and tell him that she (Hattie) wished him to come to the Bennett house to see her; that Baldwin told her that he would go home first and then call and see her, but the colored girl told him (Baldwin) that he must go there immediately.

The detectives have been unable to trace out any truth of this statement. No girl by the name of Hattie is stopping at Bennett's, although the officers say there might have been such a person staying there last Saturday night.

The Chief found Emma Dalton, the woman whom Baldwin was supposed to have been intimate with, and who she does not know Baldwin and has never seen him. Now, that any of the supposed clues have not panned out very well, it is the general impression that the shooting will fall back on Schaller.

Several prominent citizens expressed their opinions this morning that all these rumors and statements were being made to shield Schaller and have the charges against him dismissed. But he that as it is we can only confess to say that Mr. Schaller will be held to answer for the deed until the mystery is entirely sifted by the proper authorities.

A blank cartridge of thirty-two caliber was found this morning in the alley adjoining the Bennett house, and was turned over to the Chief of Police. Nothing, however, can be construed from this, as it is hardly possible that a twenty-two ball (the size found in the brain of deceased) could have been fired from a thirty-two shell.

ANOTHER STATEMENT.

Mr. Macra, proprietor of the lively stable, No. 309 Plum street, called upon the Chief this afternoon and stated that a buggy-washer in his employ had told him the following: That last Saturday night between 11 and 12 o'clock a man, whom the buggy-washer is unable to describe, came to the stable in a buggy and requested that the horse be fed immediately; that somewhere near 1 o'clock he heard some running in the alley adjoining the stable, and that a few moments afterwards this man came and got his horse and buggy and went off in a hurry.

AS UNSIGNED LETTER.

The following letter, without any signature was also received by the Chief this afternoon:

"To the Chief of Police:

"I think it my duty to inform you that a certain Mr. Hunt, a printer, on Second street, near Sycamore, was overheard to say that a friend of his positively informed him that he (the friend) was in Kitty Bennett's, and there saw Baldwin at some time Saturday night last. You can use your discretion in the matter. Having no connection in the case in any way, merely by chance hearing the above, I chose to keep my name out of print, and not trouble you with anything unnecessary.

The officers are now endeavoring to locate the whereabouts of the man Lowther, who Baldwin played billiards with in Connersville last Saturday. Lowther was seen getting on the train that Baldwin took, but since then all trace of him has been lost.
